Tales of the Sea is a semi-autobiographical novel based on my life at sea between 1957 and 1969. In its pages, the reader will meet the characters with whom I sailed, the good, the bad, the comedians and the tough guys. They will experience nights ashore and visit through my eyes exotic places to which I voyaged.

True to its title, Tales of the Neon Sea is undoubtedly neon - and it looks really, really good. The game is set in a Blade Runner-esque world, and you play as Rex Mist, P.I. - an alcoholic ex-cop-now-private-detective. You go through your miserable life one bottle at a time, broke, confused, and ...

Tales from the Sea of Thieves performs a lot of lore building for the game - although very little of that lore is currently present in the game. My biggest complaint about the book is that it starts off fairly strong, and as you get closer to the end it feels more and more rushed.

Sea narratives have a long history of development, arising from cultures with genres of adventure and travel narratives that profiled the sea and its cultural importance, for example Homer's epic poem the Odyssey, the Old English poem The Seafarer, The Icelandic Saga of Eric the Red (c.1220–1280), or early European travel narratives like Richard Hakluyt's (c. 1552–1616) Voyages (1589).

Welcome to the tales from the bay blog! In 2014 we were lucky enough to fulfil our long held dream of escaping city life in London to move to Dumfries and Galloway and take on the challenge of renovating an old house overlooking the sea. We had always wanted a house with adjoining properties where we could host holiday makers and, after a year or so of searching, we finally found the perfect place overlooking Hestan Island on the Solway Firth.

My review of Joseph Conrad's Tales of the Sea: There's really not much to say about this book. It's a collection of Joseph Conrad's stories and all of them are, as to be expected, up to the usual standard of Joseph Conrad.

It continues with more perennial classics, perfect to give as elegant gifts or to showcase on your own shelves. R is for Rushdie. Set in an exotic Eastern landscape peopled by magicians and fantastic talking animals, Salman Rushdie's classic children's novel Haroun and the Sea of Stories inhabits the same imaginative space as Gulliver's Travels, Alice in Wonderland, and The Wizard of Oz. Haroun, a 12-year-old boy sets out on an adventure to restore the poisoned source of the sea of stories. On the way, he encounters many foes, all intent on draining the sea of all its storytelling powers.

In Peter Schranz's new collection, the Bridges family tries out a new diet, a documentarian discovers that drowning is an urban legend, and a regal sea monster can't tell the difference between a human and a chimpanzee. While the author apologizes that one of the stories' most significant body of water is a lake, he assures readers that the mighty oceans feature in all six tales.

Let's face it... About seventy-five percent of the world is covered in water - and of that water nearly ninety-seven percent of it can be found in the sea. Maritimers will tell you that there is a story for every wave that has ever washed upon the shoreline. Here are seven of them. "In the Dark and the Deep" offers a very haunting yarn of World War 2 convoy duty and a sailor who made and kept a terrible bargain. "Marry's Mermaid" introduces you to a group of homeless men who catch something that MIGHT be a mermaid. If that doesn't tell you enough about this story just try and imagine what Steinbeck's CANNERY ROW would read like if it had been written by HP Lovecraft. "I Know Why The Waters of the Sea Taste of Salt" is a tale of an Okinawa-based Japanese Air Force suicide pilot and his encounter with a sea monster - of sorts. "Finbar's Story" is a dark fantasy tale of the deeper currents that eddy and flow within the deep quiet currents of a man's cold heart. "The Woman Who Lost Her Tooth From Laughing Too Loudly At The Sea" is a quiet little fable of salt water, tears and regret. "Between You-Know-Who and the Deep Dark Blue" is a story of the last bargain on earth. This collection begins with a bargain and ends with a bargain - which sounds like a heck of a bargain to me.

Includes twenty stories and poems set in the world of Ariel, the little mermaid.

Charles Dickens attained an astounding level of popular acclaim during his lifetime; Victorian audiences clamored for his traditional Christmastime stories every year. The tale "A Message from the Sea" is an example of one of Dickens' Christmas publications; although the nautical setting of the story is not what one would traditionally expect from a holiday publication, the themes of charity, good will, and rising above seemingly insurmountable odds are sure to spark a warm glow in readers' hearts any time of the year.

Mariners and dreamers alike will marvel at the thrilling authentic tales of marlin fishing, scuba diving and bonefishing presented in Hank Manley's book. What is it like to catch a 1000 lb. fish? Would you swim into a cave with a 450 lb. bull shark that was supposedly sleeping? Do animals ever display the human qualities of anger, revenge and trust? Could you catch a sailfish on line the thickness of a human hair? Can bonefishing result in broken bones? For more than 40 years, Hank and his wife Gretchen have traveled the waters of the Caribbean, the Bahamas and the Pacific in their boat Escapade. Enjoy some of their most memorable moments in Tales of a Life Upon the Sea.
